PupPlank — A helping paw for your pet

A simple, smart way to safeguard your fur baby around boat and pool

The first rule to living around the water is to teach your children to be safe. Pet owners feel the same way. All pet owners harbor a fear of their favorite four-legged friends drowning, and teaching a pet how to get out of the water is no easy task.

An animal must leverage its body weight to get out of deep water and always needs their person to hold their neck as a fulcrum. But what happens if no one is there to help him out?

A weighted, mesh net between the flotation panels offers support for your dog to climb onto the traction pad.

PupPlank is a revolutionary device that enables your pet to get out of the water on her own. The bright yellow floating ramp provides animals with a mesh area to swim into, and an inflatable platform to climb on to get out of the water. The mesh net is weighted so it falls below the waterline, allowing your pet to swim right in and then climb onto the traction pad on the platform. The platform is reinforced, providing protection against damage by your pup's nails.

The PupPlank features an H3 valve that allows full inflation or deflation in less than 4 minutes. Once you're finished with the platform for the day, just dry it and compress it into a neat package for easy storage onboard. Pets don't require any training to use the platform.

PupPlank is available in a big-dog size (tested up to 120 pounds) and medium/small-dog size too. Double D rings on the corners make it easy to attach the PupPlank securely to your boat, dock or pool.

Just think... a permanent PupPlank installed in the pool, a couple training sessions to seek out the bright yellow ramp, and you'll never have to worry about fur baby accidents again. What a spectacular product for pet owners!
